The View from the Allotment

It's another challenging year on the allotment (as they all are) - last year too much water, this year not enough.

But surprisingly the plants seem to take it all in their stride - if only we could do the same. However, we are now getting some rain and things are moving forward in leaps and bounds; potatoes, leeks, beans, carrots, blackcurrants, gooseberries, etc, all doing well. And not forgetting the strawberries which are just ripening - they are delicious. The only real disaster this year has been the parsnips, where germination has been a real problem; two sowings and only four plants to show for it.

Never mind, there's always next year!

The moral of this tale – Our Lord always provides for our needs in some form or other – trust in Him.

John

Before the mountains were born or you brought forth the whole world, from everlasting to everlasting you are God.
